Since 1947—Helping Those Who Stutter

The 400 shares of Genuine Parts Company stock donated by Malcolm Fraser in 1949 were placed — and are still held — in a safe deposit box. They have since grown through stock splits, are now worth more than $26,000,000, and have generated many millions in dividends. His gifts continued every year until his death in 1994.

Copy of the original Cash Journal covering the first nine years. The Journal was hand written by Malcolm Fraser and hangs in the Foundation's Memphis office. Documented are the very first grant to Western Michigan University for Dr. Charles Van Riper's research in 1949, a grant to Northwestern University in 1954 for a Symposium on Stuttering, and payments to Drs. Charles Van Riper, Joseph Sheehan, James Frick, and Charles Elliott for a planning session for the first SFA weeklong conference held in Delray Beach, Florida, December 27, 1956, to January 3, 1957.

75 Years: Foundation Celebrates Milestone

By James Spurlock

This article, first published 1997, is still true today. It is reprinted here with a few updates.

When Malcolm Fraser went to his Memphis bank in late December 1947 and made an initial deposit of $2,500 into a new account for a fledgling nonprofit foundation, few would have given his dream much chance of success.

President Truman was launching the Marshall Plan. Ronald Colman and Loretta Young were winning Oscars. Groucho Marx's You Bet Your Life premiered on radio. And the Yankees had just won the World Series.

But Malcolm Fraser, a self-made business success by the age of 40, had other interests that year. He stuttered. And he was determined to explore and evaluate ways of helping others who were affected by this speech disorder that today includes some three million Americans.

Seventy-five years later, Fraser's dream has long since become a reality and the cornerstone of activities that assist those who stutter worldwide.

The Stuttering Foundation of America has embraced a breadth of programs in the past seven and a half decades that are, indeed, Malcolm Fraser's proudest achievement.

The Foundation:

- publishes and distributes more than 800,000 books and brochures on stuttering therapy each year, including to readers in all the states and some 137 nations;
- responds annually to more than 50,000 e-mails and telephone calls to its toll-free helplines from those who stutter, their families, and speech-language pathologists;
- has placed DVDs and books in more than 16,306 public libraries that provide help to adults, teens, and children who stutter and their parents on how to make effective changes in their speech;
- generates over a million dollars in print, radio, and TV public service advertisements on stuttering and how people can find help.

This prodigious work has been led by the Fraser family and, in recent years, by Malcolm's daughter, Jane. Now President of the Stuttering Foundation, she has taken her support staff and the Board of Directors in new directions, but has never forgotten the positive, self-help philosophy that inspired her late father.

"I think my father had a sense of the continuing legacy he was passing on," says Jane Fraser. "It is because of his vision and considerable financial sacrifice that we now are able to train speech-language pathologists in the specifics of stuttering therapy in seminars and workshops that fill a critical need."

"The Foundation has co-sponsored professional training for speech therapists with Northwestern University, University of Iowa, Boston University, the University of Washington, St.

Catherine's College, Oxford, and the University of Memphis, to name just a few. The exciting partnership with the Michael Palin Centre in London is one more step in broadening our outreach," continues Jane Fraser. "All this represents my father's vision of 75 years ago as well."

Today, the Foundation continues to expand its universe of education, research and self-help. From one of its earliest volumes—written by the founder and still an excellent introduction for all those who stutter and hope to become more fluent in their speech—the Foundation has expanded. It publishes books, DVDs, and brochures that are distributed below cost and contain the observations and suggestions of some of the world's leading authorities on stuttering.

Additionally, the Foundation offers streaming videos, virtual learning courses, online continuing education, podcasts, workshops on Zoom, and shares free resources on social media platforms, including Facebook, LinkedIn, Twitter, YouTube, Instagram, and Pinterest.

The Foundation's Web sites, www.StutteringHelp.org and www.tartamudez.org, receive more than 6-8 million hits per month!

"There has been a remarkable explosion in demand for information on stuttering," notes Jane Fraser. "Especially when one considers that my mother was still personally shipping all the Foundation's books as recently as 1968."

Seventy-five years later, his nonprofit Foundation has expenditures of more than $2 million annually. The SFA provides support to exciting new research in genetic and neurological research that in the future will help those who stutter.

And yes, that initial $2,500 deposit in the Memphis bank by Malcolm Fraser has grown. Generous contributions in all sizes attest to its continuing public support.

An East Coast office opens at St. Simons Island, Ga.

Website, StutteringHelp.org, surpasses 45 million visitors.

The Michael Palin Centre moves into a new facility and dedicates a multi-media therapy room in memory of Malcolm Fraser.

Journalist and commentator John Stossel joined The Stuttering Foundation in New York to celebrate the 65th anniversary. Author, playwright and actor Scott Damian was honored along with Ellis Lankster of the New York Jets.

The Foundation launches www.StutteringCEUs.org for speech-language pathologists to browse for the latest CEU opportunities.

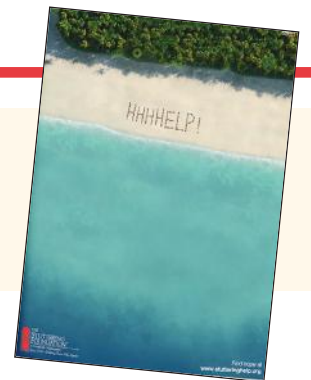

The special 65th anniversary newsletter featured many of the best covers from previous years.

2015

Letter from the Vice President thanks The Foundation for helping those who stutter.

A 2014 SFA public service print advertisement designed by Nino Illievski was selected as Best Pick of the Week by the creative director at the global advertising agency Leo Burnett New York, beating out print ads by Ford and Netflix.

2016

The cast and crew of The Huntsman movie made a donation.

The 2016 ASHA Convention reached an all-time attendance record of 16,000+. Of course, we were there to help spread the word about stuttering.

For the first time a special edition of the magazine is made up completely of letters and drawings from kids. Because of the popularity, more special editions would be published in upcoming years.

The 70th Anniversary edition marked the first time the Foundation converted from a newsletter format to a magazine.

To help spread the word about stuttering, the Foundation designed a bumper sticker, T-shirt, pencil, and patch. Here you see author, conservationist and Foundation spokesman Dr. Alan Rabinowitz with the patch on his backpack.

Videographer Bob O'Brien filmed world renowned geneticist Dennis Drayna at the University of Maryland, College Park. It resulted in the 72-minute video Understanding New Genetic Findings in Stuttering.

“I became a journalist to give a voice to the voiceless. How blessed we are today to speak up for those on the road to learning to speak boldly for themselves. As my late mother Clarice Pitts would say, ‘Doing God’s work ain’t supposed to be easy, but its gotta get done.’ Thank you for your continued support of The Stuttering Foundation. As I see it, each of you is a gift from God.” - Byron Pitts

ABC News anchor and chief national correspondent Byron Pitts was honored at the NYC Gala during National Stuttering Awareness Week.

2014

The Foundation received a surprise donation of 200 Mega Millions tickets from a family signed “The Smiths.” They said the Foundation helped them in “their time of need” nearly 40 years ago when their child was stuttering.

Four inspirational authors were honored for books that “truly capture the very essence of stuttering.” Those honored at the event (left to right): Scott Damian for V-V-Voice: A Stutterer’s Odyssey, Dr. Alan Rabinowitz for A Boy and A Jaguar, Anna Olswanger for Greenhorn, and Vince Vawter for Paperboy.

The Stuttering Foundation reached more than 55,000 pediatricians with 7 Tips for Talking With the Child Who Stutters in July of 2016. This was part of an ongoing effort to educate practitioners since 1988. The Child Who Stutters is now in its 5th revised edition and available in five languages.

I Am a Person Who Stutters
Stuttering is a condition covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act

- What is stuttering? Stuttering is a communication disorder in which the flow of speech is broken by repetitions (li-li-like this), prolongations (lllllike this), or abnormal stoppages (no sound) of sounds and syllables. There may also be unusual facial and body movements associated with the effort to speak.
- More than 70 million people worldwide stutter, which is about 1% of the population.
- There are many complex factors involved with stuttering. Stress is not the cause, but it certainly can aggravate stuttering.

The Foundation released a free TSA ID card for travelers who stutter.

The online store, www.StutteringHelp.org/store, was totally redesigned to make it easier to find resources and simplify the checkout process.

A new, easier-to-use website was launched to better categorize information and allow content to better display on mobile devices.

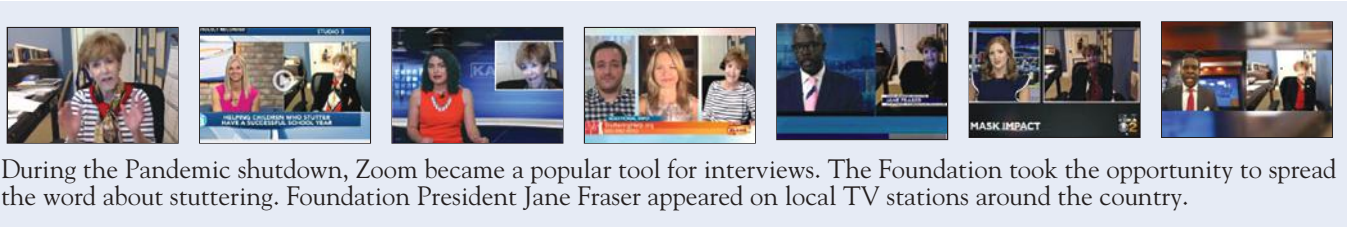

Speech-language pathologist Sara MacIntyre started producing regular podcasts that focus on a variety of issues important for the stuttering community.

Virtual Learning Series began using the Zoom platform. Hosted by Sara MacIntyre, these free, interactive workshops offer topics for speech-language pathologists, parents, and individuals who stutter.

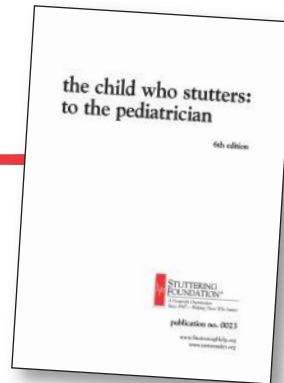

During the Pandemic shutdown, Zoom became a popular tool for interviews. The Foundation took the opportunity to spread the word about stuttering. Foundation President Jane Fraser appeared on local TV stations around the country.

The ABCs of Stuttering is a 10-minute video that helps parents and teachers understand how stuttering can affect children of all ages in the classroom. It is available free on YouTube.

The new 6th edition of The Child Who Stutters: To the Pediatrician was sent to every pediatrician in the United States

Stuttering Foundation celebrates 75 years of helping people!

Our popular video Stuttering: For Kids, By Kids was updated and renamed Stuttering: For Kids, By Kids 2.0. It features the same great content, but was revised to appeal to today's children who stutter. Hosted by an animated skateboarder, Kyle, viewers meet other kids who stutter and recount how they handle challenges such as teasing, speaking in class, and teaching others about stuttering.
